Do dividend stocks pay dividends?

They're also not just for income investors. Many great growth stocks also pay dividends. Often, a focus on dividend growth delivers better results than chasing a high yield. Dividend stocks are stocks of companies that make regular distributions to their shareholders, usually in the form of cash payments.

How often does a company pay a dividend?

Companies with dividend stocks regularly share a part of their profits with shareholders, typically every quarter, though some pay semiannually or even yearly. The dividend yield is a measure that compares the yearly dividend amount to the stock's current price, expressed as a percentage.

Should you buy stocks that pay dividends?

Companies that are paying dividends are generally in mature industries. That means, compared to growth stocks, these stocks tend to have a lower percentage growth in revenue and earnings. This may make their share price less attractive when the economy is going well. But, these stocks will tend to outperform when the economy is slowing down.
