I"ve made our solar system for a scifi worldbuilding project that i am working on, and i"m looking for some feedback to help correct it or make it more detailed. I am by no means ...

This map that I"ve made is part of a broader Space Race Alternate History worldbuilding project i made it myself named "Veil of the Red Star",a space race alternate history inspired by the likes of For all Mankind, The Expanse, the Freelancer video game, HOI4 Beyond Earth, and r/ADoveTakesFlight.This map takes place in the second part of the worldbuilding project, ...

Hey folks, I"m considering setting a story in our solar system around the year 24-2600 or so, but I"m concerned about ripping other authors off; I"ve only read a small amount of fiction that"s set in our solar system in the near- to mid-future, and I want to make sure I don"t just make a clone of the stuff I"ve read.

Astronomy is one of my hobbies, and I"m particularly intrigued by exoplanets - planets beyond our solar system. Combining this interest with my coding and writing experience, I thought to make this JavaScript Planet Generator program. Not only does it create graphical representations of such fascinating worlds, it also generates random civilizational data that ...

I picked up Solar System Maker a couple months ago, as I needed to create a number of solar system maps for a sci-fi RPG campaign I"m running. This is an excellent set with a good selection of everything you need to create interesting and varied solar systems. The selection of star field backgrounds might be my favorite part of the set.

I assume you mean because of orbits, but maps of the solar system work just fine to convey information by aligning planets in a straight line. Sure, if you actually needed to know what direction to go to reach a destination youd need a constantly up to date map, but this advanced sci fi youd probably have computers doing that anyway.
